

WHAT DID YOU ACCOMPLISH?

- Re-energized to tackle existing issues
- Made a couple of good connections
- Learned something and got inspired
- I got rides to and from the summit; I made contacts; I took notes so I can review what I learned today
- Rejuvenating my energy to work on social justice
- I have learned a lot!
- Be more committed to my own issue and act
- I listened to a group of very motivated social justice minds
- Learned more about possible election reforms & groups to work with on this
- Today I tried to use my voice in conversations to give space for other women to talk in conversations that were often dominated by men
- Networking with other congregations and their work
- Learned more about alternative voting systems
- Help others have a good summit
- learned more about advocacy
- learned about compulsory ballot return
- incorporate significant intersectional elements into my work in FAIN
- introduced a few people to Earth Ministry; met new people
- Really understand the concept of intersectionality; very powerful concept!!learned a lot more about climate/economic and racial justice
- Learned new things and what others are doing
- I accomplished a better visceral sense of intersectional issues with my main focus at climate breakdown; I nurtured important relationships
- Met other UU activists and learned about their work
- We mostly argued about what was the most urgent matter; Honestly I was frustrated at the fact that it seemed like we were having two different conversations; also, a couple of the people did the majority of the talking (particularly white men)
- Becoming more overwhelmed; seriously-identifying who are good resource folks for various issues+ websites for getting more info
- Got some good ideas on how to be more productive in achieving goals
- I attended my first justice summit
- I learned to think in a broader way about the changes I want to help with
- Network fellow workers
- Learned about other UU congregations' strategies and approaches to working on social justice issues

- Networked with others working on criminal justice
- Shared some difficult perspectives on intersectionality; learned a lot from others, their passions, issues, etc.
- Deeper discussion of issues
- Learned stuff and made connections
- Learned about effective actions underway
- I learned what other UU groups are doing for various justice reform issues and found resources to help my goals
- Did some good networking; made good contacts
- Listened more than spoke
- Shared about Poor People's Campaign: A National Call for Moral Revival
- I have a very clear understanding of intersectionality
- I met people working on issues I care about, learned about new resources
- I wrote down resources to look up later
- Helped promote the Poor People's Campaign
- I participated in discussions
